| Notes: Hi Folks - This Log is a listing and brief synopsis of most of the interactions we have at TC3 Campus Police. We present this in the spirit of transparency and have been doing so for the past several years. The notes for each interaction is not the official report, it is just a few sentences broadly outlining the incident. Occasionally, we add some crime prevention tips, some good natured humor, and, maybe, some other comments. We take our responsibilities to provide and maintain safe environments to learn and live in seriously. That doesn't preclude us from, like most people, having a sense of humor. Be kind and stay safe. Happy New Year! Beau Saul, Director of Campus Police. |  |                                   |   |

| Notes: Res life staff turned over to CP a small (thumb nail sized) glassine envelope containing what appeared to be marijuana. Item had been found in a hallway of a res hall. Or, better put: res life staff found a dime bag of pot in a hallway and called CP to take possession of it. We did. I know I've asked this before, but are there any legitimate reasons for these small sized zip-lock type bags? I guess you could always put two peanut M&Ms in one and carry it around, right? Huh. |                                     |                                   |   |

| Notes: Bat in the belfry. In this case, an actual call regarding an erratically flying mammal in a res hall. The call was answered heroically and successfully by Campus Police. CP located the mammal, captured same, and then with a moon visible through the partially cloudy night sky, over the hills of the res life community and with a steady warm spring breeze, the bat was released into the environment to which they are accustomed. No human contact by the students and the bat. The officer to be awarded with something silly to document his actions. |                                     |                                   |  |

| Notes: CP and DFD responded to a fire alarm activation at a res hall. A student had spilled some boiling grease on the stove causing flames. Adding water to the fire did not help. Fire eventually extinguished by student who received a burn injury to his hand (finger.) DFD and the Town of Dryden Code Enforcement office responded and investigated. NYS Office of Fire Prevention and Control also responded later to conduct an investigation. Student transported by Dryden EMS to a local hospital, treated, and released. The residents of the apartment were relocated to another apartment while clean-up and repair is taking place. |                                     |                                   |   |
